A recent survey of 75,000 people by the United Nations finds that 4 of 5 people worldwide want serious and effective action to address the climate crisis. Extrapolating for the population of the entire planet, that's 6.4 billion people.

People in positions of authority—government officials and businessmen—refuse to take those actions. They try to distract us and make excuses, even as climate collapse is painfully visible everywhere. They continue to protect fossil fuels and endanger our children. And their own.

We recognize that leadership and institutions everywhere have failed catastrophically.

But there are no leaders without followers. We are done following. We no longer recognize the authority of failed leaders and failed institutions. We are taking charge directly.

We have decided to empower capable, competent experts to develop and carry out a worldwide emergency plan. These experts, largely climate scientists and biologists, will act with the full support of billions of people.

Right now, we are building our numbers and spreading our message. But this is just a first step.

Soon, we will be walking off our jobs, especially people who's jobs are carrying out the destruction of the climate. Refinery workers. Natural gas pipeline operators. Miners. Even people who manufacture hardware used in those foolish activities.

We won't be asking permission. We will simply end fossil fuels.

We are fully aware that leaders (and ideologues who support those leaders) will scream bloody murder, and warn us of deadly consequences. These are the same clueless people who have willfully ignored the deadly consequences of the path that they themselves have chosen.

We are not listening. We are taking control of the conversation. We will focus on the climate, on working with the experts, on carrying out the emergency plan.

Along with these efforts, we will change the culture of the world. We will reject greed, power lust, cruelty, bigotry, and violence—the characteristics and values that formed the foundation for the self-destructive civilization into which we were born.

We will reject systems that required us to work (and waste) our entire lives, mostly producing useless crap and—in the process—pouring gigatons of toxins into our soil, our air, and our water every year.

We will work much less, producing only essentials—like healthy food, medicine, etc. and ensure that every person is given enough. This will free up time. People won't work for greedy elites. We will have a humane society. We will live as complete human beings. Together and in peace.
